Chinese made an intoxicating beverage from rice, the use of which was so disastrous that the Emperor solemnly decreed, under severe penalties, that no more, should be made or drank. Another Emperor, more than eighteen hundred years before the Christian Era, to punish his subjects for indulgence in this liquor, it is said, prepared a lake of it, and ordered 3,000 of them to throw themselves into the lake. A few hundred years later (before the Christian Era) another Emperor assem-
